BILLY BEANE and PAUL DePODESTA

0. BILLY BEANE and PAUL DePODESTA - Story Preface

1. BILLY BEANE and PAUL DePODESTA

- 2. BILL JAMES and SABERMETRICS
- 3. OAKLAND A'S of 2002
- 4. 20-GAME WINNING STREAK
- 5. CORY LIDLE FATAL ACCIDENT
- 6. WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Paul DePodesta, when he was the 31-year-old general manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Photo by Jon Soohoo, Associated Press. Copyright, Jon Soohoo, all rights reserved. Image used here as fair use for educational purposes.

Still in high school, Billy Beane was shocking all the baseball scouts. Possessing all five of the "five tools" a scout looks for in a promising young player, he was destined for greatness in Major League Baseball. He was willing to forgo a scholarship to Stanford (for the football program) to jump-start his dream.

But ... Billy wasn't able to play professional ball. At bat, he couldn't stay loose. In the field, he couldn't stay focused. Finally, after six years - including a stint with the Twins - he asked for a different job. In 1990, at the age of 27, he became an advance-scout for the Oakland A's.

Paul DePodesta - "DePo" for short (and "Peter Brand" in the film Moneyball) - had a different start. Although he played college football and baseball at Harvard, he wasn't MLB-player material. Despite his cum-laude degree in economics, he signed a contract with the Oakland A's in 1999 - to be a scout - after working with the Cleveland Indians (for three seasons).

By 2001, Beane had been the A's general manager four years. When three of his key players - outfielder Johnny Damon, first-baseman Jason Giambi and relief-pitcher Jason Isringhausen - left the organization (because the A's couldn't meet their free-agent salary demands), Billy needed to update his team.

Needing a new approach, because the A's owners would not give him enough money to fill his wish list, Billy talked with Paul. Was there a way to find undervalued players who could become baseball stars?

Both men were students of Bill James - the man from Lawrence, Kansas who produced a yearly abstract of Major-League Baseball statistics. Could all those lists of numbers somehow give Beane and his colleagues the help they needed to build a winning team for 2002?

With Paul loading and crunching numbers on his laptop, Billy took a different path than he had the year before. As the 2002 draft-day approached, Beane and his scouts evaluated their affordable prospects. Their evaluations differed - sometimes markedly - for most players.

When the roster was finalized - including new prospects who would first go to the "farm club," then work their way up to the main team - many of the A's scouts had serious doubts about their team. Whoever heard of picking stars-in-the-making by consulting numbers on a computer?

It wouldn't be the last time DePodesta was criticized for using stats to chose a team. Later, when he became general manager of the LA Dodgers, local sports writers derisively called him "Google Boy."

What was the method Beane used to pick his 2002 team? And ... who is Bill James, the baseball fanatic who developed a system which challenged an entire industry?

See Alignments to State and Common Core standards for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicAlignment/BILLY-BEANE-and-PAUL-DePODESTA-Moneyball

See Learning Tasks for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicActivities/BILLY-BEANE-and-PAUL-DePODESTA-Moneyball

Questions 2 Ponder

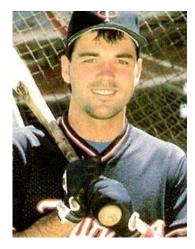

Why Get Educated before Playing Professional Sports?

When he was a high-school baseball star, other people - in this situation, baseball scouts - encouraged Billy Beane to give-up attending college because they thought his physical abilities would overcome his lack of schooling. How tempting is it to listen to such people?

Can we rely on a belief that maybe our physical talents will carry us forward as we plan our futures? Why, or why not?

Paul DePodesta had a college education - with a degree in economics from Harvard - yet wanted to work inside the high-profile sport of professional baseball. How easy would it be for such a person to "fit into" that world?

Media Stream

Billy Beane - Five-Tool Baseball Player

Photo of young Billy Beane, in 1987, when he was playing for the Minnesota Twins. Photo online, courtesy Twins.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Billy-Beane-Five-Tool-Baseball-Player

Paul DePodesta - "Peter Brand" - Harvard Wide Receiver

Photo of Paul DePodesta - on stage at the Strata Summit 2011, in New York City - by O'Reilly Conferences' photostream, online courtesy Flickr.

License: This photo is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution-Non-Commercial-No Derivs. 2.0 Generic

In short: You are free to copy, distribute and transmit the work under the following conditions:

Attribution - You must attribute the work in the manner specified by the author or licensor (but not in any way that suggests that they endorse you or your use of the work).

Noncommercial - You may not use this work for commercial purposes.

No Derivative Works - You may not alter, transform, or build upon this work.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Paul-DePodesta-Peter-Brand-Harvard-Wide-Receiver

MONEYBALL JONAH HILL PHILIP SEYMOUR HOFFMAN B A S E D O N A T R U E S T O R Y THE STATE OF THE

Moneyball - Poster

Image of theatrical-release poster, copyright Columbia Pictures, all rights reserved. Image online via Wikimedia Commons and provided here as fair use for educational purposes. View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Moneyball-Poster

Johnny Damon - 2001 Oakland A's

Photo of Johnny Damon by the Oakland A's, online courtesy Hall of Fame Memorabilia. View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Johnny-Damon-2001-Oakland-A-s

Jason Giambi - 2001 Oakland A's

Image from a May 2001 Starline poster, for the Oakland A's.

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Jason-Giambi-2001-Oakland-A-s

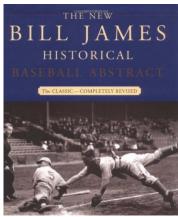

Jason Isringhausen - 2001 Oakland A's

Jason Isringhausen, with the A's in 2001, Card Number 147 of the Topps Series 1 Baseball Trading Cards. Image online, courtesy Topps Cards.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Jason-Isringhausen-2001-Oakland-A-s

Bill James - Baseball Statistics

Cover of Historical Baseball Abstract, by Bill James, online courtesy Amazon.com

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Bill-James-Baseball-Statistics

Moneyball - Behind the Scenes

Clip about the making of Moneyball, online at $\underline{MakingOf's}$ Channel at YouTube.

License for this clip: Standard YouTube License, which is Creative Commons - Attribution (CC-BY - reuse allowed).

In short: Others may copy, distribute and create derivative works from a YouTube video ONLY if credit is given.

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Moneyball-Behind-the-Scenes