6. A VISIT FROM SAINT NICHOLAS

Nicholas was born to Christian parents in the Mediterranean town of Patara. That ancient town is now known as Demre, Turkey. This map depicts the location of Patara / Demre in modern-day Turkey (an area of the world once called "Asia Minor").

Saint Nicholas was born in the seaport town of Patara, on the Turkish coast, in about 271 A.D. Although his parents were very wealthy, they died (most likely of plague) when Nicholas was still a boy.

At the time, Turkey was called Asia Minor. Today the ruins of Patara are mostly under the beautiful sandy beaches of the area.

Not much has been excavated, although some ruins are visible. Little is known about the early years of his life. During the centuries, legend has replaced fact.

According to Butler's Lives of the Saints, Nicholas wanted to share the wealth his parents had left him. And it is that sharing of wealth, and how he did it, that led to his increasing fame and his association with protecting children.
