BRAMASOLE

- 0. BRAMASOLE Story Preface
- 1. CORTONA
- 2. THE ETRUSCANS
- 3. UMBRIA and TUSCANY
- 4. FRANCES MAYES
- 5. BRAMASOLE

Frances Mayes and Ed Kleinschmidt continue to improve their 200-year-old-plus home, called Bramasole. This image, online via "Living Winsomely," depicts how Bramasole appeared in 2012. Click on the image for a great view.

Cortona is a walled town. Living within those walls, for Frances Mayes, is like living inside a castle.

An Etruscan wall, built in the 8th century B.C., is located near the farmhouse Frances and Ed now call home. (The house is actually named after that wall - Bramasole.) No one has any idea who built it - or for whom. No one kept such records back then. (The movie version of Bramasole is actually the nearby Villa Laura.)

When she first fell in love with the place, Frances didn't know the property's history. A former resident helped her learn some of the stories related to her house. Italian farmers down the road think of it as "new" since their homes are a thousand years old.

Abandoned thirty years, the property needed a great deal of work. Inside, as she cleared away decades of neglect and whitewash, Frances discovered a fresco in the dining room. It depicts a lovely scene of Lake Trasimeno surrounded by Italy's Apennine Mountains. Outside, she pulled brambles away from an old vineyard. Perhaps Bramasole would produce a grape harvest again.

As she breathed new life into her 200-year-old home, Frances began to recover from an unexpected end to her first marriage. It had lasted twenty years. With Ed Kleinschmidt by her side, she focused on the future, not the past.

When the house was still empty, locals had picked cherries, figs and daffodils (those yellow spring flowers which William Wordsworth so beautifully described). After Frances bought the property, people still helped themselves to the fruit of the land. After all, abandoned farm houses were not unusual in Tuscany at the time. Entire families had not returned to their homes after the war was over.

Looking over the valley, from her vantage point at Bramasole, Frances and her guests see an ever-changing light. Hues—which alternate from blue, to rose, to golden—blanket the landscape. Under the Tuscan sun, sunflowers bloom for six weeks.

At night, during August, Italy celebrates San Lorenzo - the night of the shooting stars. Using her kitchen, which opens to the outside, Frances always has a party that night. It promotes a sense of well-being, she says, to have dinner al fresco.

With the Tuscan sun shining by day, and shooting stars entertaining by night, who could disagree that, in Italy, Frances Mayes has found her own sense of well-being?

See Alignments to State and Common Core standards for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicAlignment/BRAMASOLE-Under-the-Tuscan-Sun

See Learning Tasks for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicActivities/BRAMASOLE-Under-the-Tuscan-Sun

Media Stream

Bramasole in 2012

It isn't easy to keep-up a home which is 200-plus years old, but Frances Mayes and Ed Kleinschmidt keep improving their Tuscany treasure which is located in the town of Cortona.

This image depicts how Bramasole appeared in 2012.

Click on the image for a much-better view.

This image, depicting Bramasole as it appeared in 2012, is online via Living Winsomely.

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Bramasole-in-2012

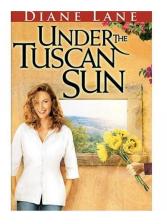

Etruscan Wall Near Bramasole

Image online, courtesy corys.it website.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Etruscan-Wall-Near-Bramasole

Under the Tuscan Sun - Movie Poster

Image online, courtesy amazon.com website.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Under-the-Tuscan-Sun-Movie-Poster

Apennine Mountains

Photo provided here by Lucio De Marcellis. Online courtesy Wikimedia Commons.

License: CC BY-SA 3.0. View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Apennine-Mountains