3. VIRGINIA WOOLF'S SUICIDE

4. LAURA BROWN

5. CLARISSA VAUGHAN

She was born "Adeline Virginia Stephen" on January 25, 1882. Her father, Sir Leslie Stephen, founded the Dictionary of National Biography and was absolutely devoted to Virginia's mother, Julia Jackson Duckworth, his second wife.

Virginia's mother died when her daughter was only thirteen. By the time the soon-to-be-famous writer was twenty-two, her father was also dead. Two years later, the brother she adored - Thoby - died of typhus.

The future writer had mental breakdowns likely due, at least in part, to all these deaths.

In 1925, not long after the end of the first world war, Virginia released her novel Mrs. Dalloway. Using a "stream of consciousness" style that parallels the works of James Joyce, the novel (its working title was The Hours) revolutionized writing of fiction in the 20th century.

It is also at the heart of Michael Cunningham's Pulitzer Prize-winning story The Hours and begins with the famous first line:

Mrs. Dalloway said she would buy the flowers herself.

Today, thanks to the BBC, we can still hear Virginia Woolf's voice - even though she died in 1941. In this audio clip, recorded four years after Mrs. Dalloway was published, she gives her eulogy to words entitled, Words Fail Me.

And ... in her letters and diaries, we learn about her debilitating headaches and bouts of depression which interrupted her creative work and life with her husband, Leonard Woolf.
