THE BIRD - THEN AND LATER

- 0. THE BIRD THEN AND LATER Story Preface
- 1. ZAMPERINI and the 1936 OLYMPICS
- 2. LOUIE GOES TO WAR
- 3. ZAMP and HIS SUPER MAN B-24
- 4. B-24s IN COMBAT
- 5. SUPER MAN ATTACKS FUNAFUTI and NAURU
- 6. A GREEN HORNET and GREY SHARKS
- 7. KWAJALEIN EXECUTION ISLAND
- 8. PRISON CAMPS OFUNA and OMORI
- 9. NAOETSU and CAMP B-4

10. THE BIRD - THEN AND LATER

- 11. WHEN LOUIE MET BILLY
- 12. FORGIVENESS

This image depicts Mutsuhiro (Matsuhiro) Watanabe. Prisoners of War called him "The Bird."

Tom Henling Wade - a Brit whom Zamp first met at the Omori prison camp - provides some background about Mutsuhiro Watanabe. In his book, Prisoner of the Japanese, Wade describes "The Bird" - whose first name is sometimes spelled Matsuhiro - as a man from a wealthy family:

Watanabe was the spoilt son of a wealthy family. As he'd told us, he had a beautiful home with a swimming pool in the hills behind Kobe, unlimited money, an adoring mother and he had led a dissolute student's life. Watanabe went to school at Waseda University in Tokyo, then worked for Domei, the Japanese news agency.

When called up by the army, he had immediately taken the examination for a commission. When he failed he resented it deeply, as his brother and brother-in-law were officers. So the army made him a corporal (later a sergeant), spared him service overseas and settled him at the age of twenty-seven, in a safe berth at Tokyo Headquarters Camp. (Wade, Prisoner of the Japanese, Kangaroo Press, 1994.)

The Bird's treatment of Allied officers - under his authority while they were prisoners of war - may well have stemmed from his resentment of officers in general. He couldn't be one, so he made their lives as miserable as possible.

One of his favorite punishments was ordering enlisted men to punch their officers in the head. He would punish anyone who didn't forcefully throw the punch. Zamp relates what would happen:

We'd line up while each noncom was forced to walk down the line striking an officer with his fist. After each punch, the Bird shouted, "Next!" It became a maniacal chant: "Next-next-next..." When our men hit easy he'd club them on the head. We'd whisper, "Look, hit us once. Hard." Then we'd go down and Watanabe was satisfied. So were we, preferring to be hit by our own men than by anyone Japanese. (Zamperini, Devil at My Heels, page 158.)

David James - who, like Tom Wade, understood Japanese - knew the Bird's family before the war. Singling him out for special punishment, Watanabe ordered James to do a particularly humiliating task:

...the Bird beat Captain James and forced him to stand in front of his office for several days and nights, in early winter, saluting the tree planted in front of the door - not an easy task for a starving, sixty-three-year-old POW. After a few days, Dr. James collapsed, nearly insane, and spent weeks in bed recovering. (Zamperini, Devil at My Heels, pages 159-160.)

When he learned the war was over, the Bird hid. Although he was high on the "most-wanted" list, he never faced a war-crimes trial. Other Japanese men who were lower on the list than he were given prison - or death - sentences, but Watanabe never faced a court accuser.

He surfaced, again, after the Allies decided to suspend the war-crimes process. Japan, now an ally of the West, had become important as a Communist-resisting country. When prisoners-of-war were let out of jail, the Bird began a new life - selling insurance.

His efforts, as a civilian, made him a wealthy man.

See Alignments to State and Common Core standards for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicAlignment/THE-BIRD-THEN-AND-LATER-Unbroken-Louis-Zamperini-Story

See Learning Tasks for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicActivities/THE-BIRD-THEN-AND-LATER-Unbroken-Louis-Zamperini -Story

Questions 2 Ponder

Is Cruelty between Human Beings Preventable?

Mutsuhiro Watanabe, a POW-camp commandant whom POWs nicknamed "The Bird," was exceptionally cruel to POW inmates.

Among other things, he required POWs to stand perfectly still while holding, above their heads, a heavy wooden cross beam until he told the POW he could stand at ease. On one occasion, Louis Zamperini held such a crossbeam above his head for 37 minutes.

The Bird seemed to take pride in being exceptionally cruel to his POW charges. The POWs were, after all, enemies of Japan.

Do you think that Watanabe was just doing his job, in his treatment of the POWs, who were enemies of Japan? Why, or why not?

Do you think that torture, of prisoners of war, is ever acceptable? If so, under what circumstances?

Do you think that cruelty between human beings - even in a prisoner-of-war camp - is preventable? If so, how could it be prevented?

Media Stream

Mutsuhiro Watanabe - The Bird - Played by Miyavi

Eva Rinaldi took this picture of Angelina Jolie with Miyavi on the 18th of November, 2014. Online via Wikimedia Commons. License: CC BY-SA 2.0

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Mutsuhiro-Watanabe-The-Bird-Played-by-Miyavi

Louis Zamperini - Played by Jack O'Connell

Jack O'Connell plays the role of Louis Zamperini (called "Zamp" by his friends) in the film version of "Unbroken."

O'Connell's road to stardom was very rocky, but he did not give-up on his dreams. Read more about him in this BBC article.

Click on the image for a better view.

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Louis-Zamperini-Played-by-Jack-O-Connell

THE BIRD - THEN AND LATER

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/