THE HOUSE of MEMORIES

By Janice Veldman

Walking in the dark
searching for the house

upon finding it
she looks through the window the room dimly lit
by the flame in the fireplace

the family is gathered she stands and watches
must be someone's birthday slowly the flame is out a lonely walk home

for days she sleeps
no memories to find
when stronger she will go out again dress warmly it will be a cold night the faces are smiling, laughing she sees

but cannot hear their voices voice gives meaning to what she sees

the sights are only half told parts missing
some make no sense

it is bitter cold standing there she should have taken a scarf walking home is not easy

she stumbles a few times returning home
she tries to recall what she saw without recall

the memory is faded
it is gone
the flame went out

she sleeps
